Mr. Rodriguez shares a presentation detailing the Service to the Armed Forces program. The Red Cross has provided “comfort and support” to members of the U.S. military for 130 years. These services are a part of a continuum of care that include information and referral services, resiliency workshops to help families cope with deployment, emergency services that include verified message delivery and access to financial assistance and resources, reconnection workshops that provide support with mental health and communication, and military hospital and clinic programs. The American Red Cross has volunteer opportunities, VA programs, and job training opportunities available to veterans. Resiliency programming features a variety of workshops facilitated by licensed mental health professionals available to veterans and families. Additionally, the local chapter endeavors to establish MOUs with bases to develop contact with active duty personnel.
